welcome to banba house

Thank you for taking the time to visit Banba House situated in the wonderful little historic town of Athenry. I am sure that you will find the following information that I have put together for you in this booklet helpful and interesting. It's certainly well worth your while browsing through the pages.

Athenry (meaning The King's Ford) is an ancient town, set in the middle of the fertile plains of East Galway. It was established as a market town in the 13th century and its streetscape reflects its medieval past, with narrow streets and town walls. The best preserved section of the wall is found at the North Gate, and is also a major feature in the town. Athenry has been designated as a 'Heritage Status' village, thereby making it an ideal place to live and to holiday.

For anyone planning to visit Athenry, I recommend that you read the history before you arrive so that you get the most out of your time here. Be sure to plan a visit to the Castle and Heritage Centre.

Please let me know what I can do for you to make your stay here memorable! You'll be sure to find the legendary 'Irish Hospitality' abundant here at Banba House.

Regards,

Ray

phones/internet

Internet works well in Athenry using a dongle. You can buy a temporary dongle service from Vodafon on the mainstreet in Athenry for internet on your own laptop. I have two local cell phones that you can use while in Ireland with national service, just buy some credit in a local store and you're up and running.

drinking water

Water from the cold tap in the kitchen is drinking water. County Galway is set on a lime-based rock formation and at times you may see a very small amount of lime particles at the bottom of your kettle or cup. This is quite normal in the Galway area and the water is perfectly safe to drink and for you to enjoy.

IMPORTANT!
water info...

electric shower units

Due to limescale in the water in Galway area, water heated appliances are vulnerable to its effects, therefore, please ensure to not exceed the maximum temp marked on the electric shower unit as indicated. (marked in blue)

If the temp is exceeded, it will cause the thermostat to overheat and fail. Repairs are expensive (Euro 200 +) and can sometimes take a couple of days to have a qualified engineer arrive to carry out repairs.

The max temp indicated will give very hot water if required. Turn on the electric shower by pressing the button on the front of the unit and allow a few seconds for it to heat. The shower unit in the large bathroom is fed from the central heating system.
